There are normally 1-2 cars parked along Ahrens st. right in front of the house. Occasionally there might be 4. Last week there was 4 and they were bumper to bumper and it was difficult to see but if you slow down and use common sense, there are no problems.

I do see the bushes as being a problem in the cases when the cars are parked there though. They were smaller and now have gotten bigger.

I don't believe that putting signs up in this neighborhood would help, people do not obey the signs that are on the side streets along N. 12th St., especially the kids on the bikes. They don't look for traffic and just keep going right through the stop. There is the problems. I personally have been in two close calls this school year already.

The attached photo was taken at about 4:45 P.M. on Monday, November 21st. No cars parked in front of the corner property.

I was out there on 11/10 at about 1:15 pm or so, and there was only 2 cars out there.

My recommendation is to doing nothing and continue to monitor it.
